

PRIVACY + CONFIDENTIALITY

Just how important is confidentiality in executive search?
Extremely. This is why.

PRIVACY + CONFIDENTIALITY

Discretion and a sensitive touch are essential to all aspects of high-level recruitment. Leaked information can have serious consequences.

Because of the nature of what we do, our work is undertaken in the strictest confidence. Both our clients and our candidates place their trust in us, and we know that our firm's reputation rides on every search we perform.

SILENCE IS GOLDEN

Everyone knows that people move jobs. And, broadly speaking, people move because they have a more attractive offer from another employer. But even though this happens all the time, across all industries, it doesn't mean the recruitment process should be out in the open. Quite the opposite, in fact.

PLAYING IT COOL

We value discretion and diplomacy because it's always in our clients' best interests. No one needs their recruitment efforts scrutinized or talked about. What they need is a search done intelligently, efficiently and confidentially.

This avoids any of the potential fallouts: from the soon-to-be-replaced employee finding out the wrong way about his or her impending departure to someone hearing that a competitor has its sights on a key member of staff. There is a very simple way of ensuring this never happens – total client privacy.

“Integrity is the essence of everything successful.”

➤ A TIGHT SHIP

One of the many advantages of being a small firm is we have complete control over what is said and how it is communicated. We're discreet, careful and can absolutely guarantee that the only people who know about your search are the people that need to know.

➤ QUALITY

Unlike some of the larger firms that may lack the controls required to properly handle the sensitivity of these matters, our experience, our processes, and knowledge of the marketplace means you never have to worry.

➤ AN INVALUABLE COMMODITY

At a time when corporate principles are subject to intense public scrutiny, it's important to recognize that discretion and confidentiality are invaluable commodities in themselves.
